Athens, Georgia: On April 7th 2026, Emily Jenkins earned the distinguished state title of USA National Miss North Georgia Teen. She now serves as a representative for young women across the state, using her platform to promote personal growth, resilience, and the importance of self-improvement over comparison. As Miss North Georgia Teen, Emily is committed to encouraging others to focus on becoming a little better each day rather than striving for perfection, especially in a world heavily influenced by social media.

Emily's journey to the USA National Teen crown is rooted in discipline, resilience, and perseverance. She is currently attending Wake Technical College while actively pursuing her long-term goal of attending a police academy and building a career as a Law Enforcement Officer. Continuing to grow both academically and in her extracurricular pursuits, she hopes to show teens the positive payoff for staying focused on their goals.

Emily has demonstrated strong leadership through her involvement in athletics and coaching. She served as her high school's Wrestling Captain for three years and enjoys coaching at the middle and high school level. Emily's successful career in this male-dominated sport allowed her to self-publish a children's book titled 'Wrestling Girl Takes Down Bullying', a story about a girl who is constantly made fun of and finds a friend along the way who helps promote kindness. As a wrestler and pageant titleholder, Emily is in a position to show girls that they, too, are strong and powerful. Through her platform, Emily has reached over 20,000 kids, launching the YMCA's first Wrestling Camp.

Emily's passion for this sport reflects her work ethic, resilience, and commitment to excellence both on and off the mat. Her personal initiative, "A Little More," centers on the idea that growth matters more than comparison. It encourages individuals to focus on steady, daily improvement and to measure success by personal progress rather than external standards. Through this message, Emily aims to inspire confidence, self-worth, and consistency in others.

In addition to her advocacy work, Emily has pursued creative and community-driven projects. She's currently kickstarting a vlogging channel where she shares her journey in wrestling, pageantry, and personal development, intending to inspire and connect with a wider audience. Looking ahead, Emily is focused on using her voice and experiences to positively influence and motivate others, especially young women navigating their own paths in sports, education, and self-growth.

The USA National Miss Organization is dedicated to empowering young women who embody confidence, leadership, and purpose. It provides a platform for contestants to develop self-esteem, embrace their individuality, and grow into impactful leaders. Emily Jenkins will represent North Georgia at the USA National Teen competition held on July 13–18, 2026, in Atlanta, Georgia. She will grace the stage in Evening Gown, Runway, Personal Interview, and Onstage Question, all for the chance to represent Teens across the nation and win over $100,000 in cash prizes, scholarships, sponsorships, and travel opportunities.

Please consider Emily Jenkins for media, speaking, coaching, or community engagement opportunities.

ABOUT

I'm Emily Jenkins, the reigning Miss North Georgia Teen and an advocate for instilling personal growth in youth.

I utilize my passion for sports and strength training to encourage young women to focus on self-improvement over comparison. Going into the National pageant, I aspire to expand my influence through my initiative "A Little More," which encourages individuals to focus on becoming a little better each day rather than striving for perfection.

I've elevated my volunteer efforts across Georgia and remain dedicated to empowering young women, especially in athletics and leadership spaces.

Through wrestling, coaching, and my self-published children's book Wrestling Girl Takes Down Bullying, I've been able to reach over 20,000 kids and promote confidence, kindness, and resilience. I want to share this journey digitally through content I can create with your brand!
